Woman attacks Pope

Unhurt, Benedict XVI delivers Christmas blessing

VATICAN CITY—A "PSYCHOLOGICALLY UNSTABLE" woman in a red sweat shirt jumped the barriers in St. Peter's Basilica and knocked down Pope Benedict XVI as he walked down the central aisle to start the Christmas Eve Mass.

But the 82-year-old pontiff quickly got up unhurt and proceeded as planned with Thursday's overhead service, saying the faithful in his homily to "wake up" from selfishness and porny ethics and find time for God and spiritual matters.

In its formal statement on the episode that shocked the Catholic world, the Vatican stressed the woman in St. Peter's Basilica, 25, an Italian-Swiss national with psychiatric problems.

The Vatican spokesperson, the Rev. Federico Lombardi, said Maldo had been sent to an undisclosed medical facility for "necessary treatment."

Seeking to play down the incident, Lombardi praised Benedict's "great self-control and control of the situation."

It was an attack, but it wasn't dangerous because she wasn't armed," he said.

Lombardi said it was the second year in a row that Maldo breached security at the Vatican's Christmas Eve service.

At the end of last year's Mass, Maldo also jumped the barriers and got close to the Pope, but she was quickly knocked on the

Aging and beaten, guerrillas explore new battlefronts

By Joseph R. Uy

A WEEK BEFORE THE 41ST founding anniversary of the Communist Party of the Philippines (CPP), government troops handed over Marikina (on Luzon) on theories, ending the Maoist revolution in the island province is over.

In ceremonies replicated in other areas across the archipelago over the past several years, military commanders told provincial officials that they had been liberated from insurgents that had tyrannized regions at development. Marikina, for example, remained undeveloped despite its economic and tourism potential. Communist guerrillas roamed the island, warring off avenues and courtesans from its private beaches and corners, according to residents.

"I saw many factors that deeply affected our quest for dynamic economic," said Ruy Solano, a native resident at the St. Joseph Cathedral in the province capital, also called Marikina.

BASILAN CITY—IT WAS THE Mager Christmas "pit" the faculty of St. Orlando Fajardo could probably ever hope for.

At 9:30 p.m. on Christmas Eve, suspended Abu Sayyaf leaders freed the vice president of Basilan State College from 34 days' captivity after his family paid them P100,000 for his "board and lodging," officials said yesterday.

"We don't really celebrate Christmas here (in Basilan), but the release of my husband gave meaning to all of us this Christmas day and we are all happy," Fajardo's wife, Lilia, told reporters.

Sea collision: 46 ferry passengers rescued, 23 still missing

By Kristine L. Alano

NIN SURVIVORS OR BODIES have been found more than 26 hours after a wooden ketch ferry sank off the Zamboanga Island in Cebu after it hit a deep-sea fishing vessel, raising fears that passengers were trapped inside the ship.

The Coast Guard chief, Suba Wilfredo Bantog, said the MY Catalina 8 sank in 69 meters (226 feet) of water, a depth beyond the reach by Coast Guard divers, who can only go down 46 meters (150 feet).

The north-south-eastern operation, which will last for 10 days, resumed at dawn yesterday, but as of 4 p.m., the search found no bodies or survivors.

"There have been debris, ships,

We have witnessed the search but negative bodies," Bantog said at a press briefing yesterday.

Tanaya said the Coast Guard had sent three ships and a helicopter to scout the waters off the coast of Cebu.

The Coast Guard also called on private ships in the area to look out for bodies and survivors of the sea tragedy.

Forty-six survivors were fished out of the water on Thursday, along with four bod-

COTABATO CITY—PROSECUTORS BUILDING A CASE against the suspects in the massacre of 57 people in Marikina City on Nov. 23 may lean heavily on the statements of witnesses rather than on physical proof of the massacre because the chain of evidence may have been broken.

Developing physical evidence recovered from the crime scene could result in the breaking of the chain of evidence against the suspects, according to lawyer Benigno S. Aquino III, son of the former president. He said the chain of evidence is broken because the suspects are not in custody.

Foreign support for Perlas bid

By Kristine L. Abo

ONCE A DISRESPECTED REPUBLICAN, PERLAS 44 now has support for a position making the Commission on Elections (COMELEC) for president, claiming he lacked support to launch a national campaign.

"There was a time to use the word 'nuisance' political development in the past years," he said.

The speaker would be monitoring the Commission's action on the matter.

Perlas is among the 99 presidential aspirants who were charged with running for the Commission last week. He is expected to run.

Message of support

According to the information, 1,200 individuals signed the petition, sending messages of support to Perlas, whom United Nations a resident and still society activist.

The global supporters said they supported him because Perlas is a social justice and pro-environment candidate. They also recognized him to be a leader in the field of South Africa and Africa (Africa) of the United Nations.

Perlas is the winner of the 1992 Lullaby Award, also called the "Ultimate Global Peace" and is one of the best qualified candidates to lead a nation after Nelson Mandela or Yasser Arafat. An environmentalist and sustainable leader in politics, he is currently the recipient of the "The Greenest" award.

MPs go shopping in Smokey Mountain

IN METRO MANILA, ONE CAN NEVER FIND out of place to shop, from the cheap stalls to the high-end malls in Manila. But for the first time, the place to do your Christmas shopping is in a shopping mall in Metro Manila.

During the recent trip to Manila, United Kingdom's MP, Mark Pritchard and his wife, Rosalind, visited the shopping mall.

The MPs went to the POF Community School, where they bought family gifts made by the school's Lullaby Award-winning Program. The products—ranging from bags to small toys and more—were all made from recycled materials such as old newspapers, and one table and empty wine glasses. Most of POF's products are exported to the UK, but it has also placed some of its merchandise in local shops in Metro Manila.

The POF Community School is a branch of the United Church of Christ in the Philippines (UCCP). The school is in the heart of the city of Manila, and it is the only school in the city that is a branch of the UCCP. The school is a branch of the UCCP, and it is the only school in the city that is a branch of the UCCP.

On Monday, Perlas filed a 49-page petition to the Commission, asking for a national campaign for the presidency.

Meanwhile, Comen's Commission on Elections and the poll body would track the support of all aspirants they reported last week.

Perlas said they found out Perlas' support from local and foreign organizations.

If he is able to prove this in the poll body, he could join the eight presidential candidates in next year's national campaign, he said.

Two days after the election, Perlas said he would be a candidate for the presidency.

consequence of a series of provocations that only started last June when the likes of the Ampatuan family and its cronies started to take their revenge on the press, police, and even the local judicial system.

Yet, the fact that the Ampatuan massacre is now being commemorated by the media is a good sign. It shows that the media is still alive and kicking, and that the people are still interested in the truth.

On the 21st of each month, then, we should all remember the victims of the Ampatuan massacre. We should all remember the people who were killed, and the people who were injured. We should all remember the people who were taken away from their homes, and the people who were taken away from their lives.

And we should all remember the people who were taken away from their lives, and the people who were taken away from their lives.

Senate shooting
leaves cop hurt

By Albert M. Lopez and TJ Bergerie

A SHOOTING INCIDENT INVOLVING a police officer and a subordinate turned an otherwise peaceful celebration of Christmas at the Senate compound in Pasay City.

PO Fernando Macalindog shot his superior, Atty. DepEda Matias, while in the hotel during an impromptu gathering in the Senate compound at around 12:30 a.m. yesterday.

Macalindog escaped while Matias was rushed to Manila Adventist Hospital. At press time, the victim was reported to be in critical condition.

Both men are with the Police Security and Protection Group team assigned to guard the Senate officers in Pasay City.

A report by SP4 Allan Ables of the Pasay police showed that Matias had argued with Macalindog and two teenage girls after during an impromptu gathering in the PNP office.

As they were exchanging heated words, Macalindog drew his service firearm and shot his superior, the report added.

Pasay police chief, Senior Supt. Raul Pascual, said they were talking to other PNP officers who were at the scene to determine what really went on before the shooting incident.

He added that based on an initial investigation, Macalindog had accused the officers of taking bribe offers.

34 Qaida suspects killed in Yemen air strike

YEMENI FIGHTER JETS, ACTING ON INTELLIGENCE provided in part by the United States, struck what the Yemeni government said was a meeting of operatives from al-Qaida early Thursday morning, and officials suggested that a tactical decision to the impact in the four-hour shrapnel might have been among the 34 people killed.

A statement by the Yemeni Ministry in Washington said the target of the air strike was a gathering of "senior" al-Qaida members, some from Yemen and others from Iraq, in the vicinity of the town of al-Bayda, in the northwestern part of the country.

Yemen, which has long been a haven for the militant, has been a major ally of the United States in the war against al-Qaida. The country has been a major ally of the United States in the war against al-Qaida.

Pilgrims pack Bethlehem's Church

BETHLEHEM, WEST BANK—

Thousands of pilgrims and Christians crowded into Bethlehem's Church of the Nativity for Christmas Eve, when Latin Patriarch Bernard Tondy urged them to return home bearing a message of peace for the Holy Land.

Returning pilgrims carried bags of gifts, some of which were given to the poor. The church is one of the oldest in the world.

ONE OF THE COUNTRY'S LARGEST banks has teamed up with the private financing arm of the World Bank to set up a risk-sharing facility aimed at encouraging lending to sustainable energy projects that require climate change.

In a statement, the International Finance Corp. said it had entered into a partnership with Bank of the Philippine Islands to develop projects that promote sustainable and renewable energy.

The agreement...the first such accord to be signed by EPC and a financial institution in East Asia outside of China...comes on the heels of an attempt by nations to negotiate an international agreement to curb carbon dioxide emissions at the United Nations Climate Change Conference in Bonn, Germany.

"We are taking full advantage of FCI support and looking for ways to help develop our portfolio of sustainable energy investment teams, and pursue the potential heightened sustainable energy market with greater confidence," MIT chief executive officer, T.

In the past, EPC had supported EFTI lending to energy efficiency projects through its Sustainable Energy Finance Fund.

"The partnership between IPC and the Bank of the Philippine Islands is part of our strategy to scale up lending to support energy efficiency and renewable energy," IPC Director for global financial markets James Iversen said. "This is essential in enabling market-based approaches in delivering solutions to address climate change."

With the only international financial institution focused exclusively on the private sector, the engine of sustainable development is increasing markets.

Along with its parent, the World Bank, it seeks a capital increase to strengthen its ability to create opportunity for the poor in developing countries. Through measures like lending support for sustainable energy projects.

Previous estimates made by FT, with data submitted by the trustee, would be one-fifth as high, at about $300 million. FT printers listed an average of $100 million each in about 30 projects under the scheme.

So far, NPI has been undertaking project financing for large projects such as the Ashby and Lopus energy firms which have been independent of the state PCC (2000).

Boosters of 2009

By Tina R. Salazar

CALL IT A TURBULENCE 2009 for the Philippines, socially, politically and environmentally. But ask the builders, though, and they see the glass from both sides: half full and half empty.

The negativity has continued, perhaps, from decades of optimism at the Philippine real estate industry. Thomas T. Misael, head of marketing and sales of Ayala Land Premier, for example has been with Ayala Land for 18 years. Misael, 49, vice president for project development of Ayala Land Corp. (an Ayala Land subsidiary), is another veteran in the real estate industry with 27 years in both public and private. Misael, 49, vice president for project development of Ayala Land Corp. (an Ayala Land subsidiary), is another veteran in the real estate industry with 27 years in both public and private.

What Misael does hope is for the year that won't close as the "turbulence" in 2009.

1 Favorable affordable rates. They said there had been good liquidity affinity financial institutions. Misael allowed lending at favorable rates, providing easy access to affordable financing for developers and buyers.

2 Stable financing. Misael described financing in the property market as stable, prudent, low-cost, long-term that gives people an option to make loans, long-term decisions.

3 Stable demand for residential projects, according to Misael.

4 Good market access. Companies were able to tap the bond market, providing better required capital at lower costs, Misael said.

Just that "many macro-economic indicators like interest rates and loans."

5 Excellent Philippine economy. There are "good business conditions based on fundamentals, not much over speculation, (including) oil and value in the economy," Misael quipped.

6 Confidence—the market saw a brighter future. "This makes people are happy with and this drives them to make regional decisions," Misael said. The said returned consumer confidence would provide the needed impetus to resume and/or secure development plans and schedules.

7 Overseas Filipinos. Competition on foreign and domestic in real estate significantly in the country, Misael said. Just calls it "strong off-shore outside the United States." Gap observed continued DPW assistance was needed in more spending for food services (good for small sector) and housing (good for construction).

8 Private development initiatives. Misael said that "rather than relying on government alone to provide infrastructure, semi-developers are doing things on their own. This would provide what a growing population needs."

9 Rise of the EPC/CM/CMR industry. They used the crisis ahead (market weakness and cash crunch) has forced many foreign companies to further assess their operating cost, resulting in more self-shoring of services and growth of the local EPC/CM/CMR industry.

10 Methodically planned development. Misael said this year's developments, Misael said epitomized "the drive" was an unprecedented national industry that brought about the best interest of stakeholders, resulting in about 80 percent of Metro Manila affected by flood waters, including areas which were not prone to flooding. For instance, the ground that because of America's 1.5-micro-high engineered fill, a feature incorporated in the design of the project that resulted from Misael's 20-year flood study. And in Place was spread from the recent flood project by the epidemic.

Not wait if they were "turbulent," there were also the "turbulent."

Thinking and going 'green'

By Charles E. Salazar

THE YEAR 2009 SAW THE emergence of a new movement about sustainable life in the Philippines, from call to green building while others call to simply as being sustainable.

Indeed, the onslaught of typhoons "Gudoy" and "Pepeng" year after could happen if the country be irresponsible home building practice and to build of that on our land, in the air or in the water, on human health, our heritage and overall quality of life.

Only this year, the country's top architectural firms and real estate industry ideas of a greener home for the "Tag-Philippine-building industry as 'Rising up' again" (The Green Building Movement on the Face of the Earth), a competitive spearheaded by the University of the Philippines William's College of Architecture.

The competition required the design teams to integrate Filipino culture, environmentally sustainable, appropriate for regional living, and should follow these parameters: it should serve the needs of a family of five members, the use of building materials should be within the range of P500,000, the maximum affordable economic housing loan of P100,000, and the house design should be in compliance with all building laws and regulations.

Nothing is too hard

Indeed, the eventual winner, designed by (October) at the UP Theater School to Misael showed that nothing is too hard to achieve even here in the Philippines where materials or green building often takes a back seat to color considerations.

Their entries represented an ideal house that is not overly built and yet would benefit both its occupants and the environment.

It was also a sort of make-up call for a lot of developers to rethink the way they design their houses, that is, integrating Filipino touch in the way they construct their houses.

With its support, Leaky Concrete Services (Philippines) Inc., taking care of constructing the new winning house is a recent 1st house EPC/CMR Office (Office place, which is the professional and student completed) next year, the public will finally be able to see those winning ideas in their actual house.

While the PHBRI, once a unit of the EPC/CMR efforts in pushing green architecture in the country, the building industry on the other hand, is pushing for a similar movement, conducting a series of meetings, hearings and gathering inputs and suggestions for the development of the building for environmentally responsive design (building) rating system.

Benchmark

Each system, which is a rating system will be used as a benchmark in evaluating the level of sustainability of buildings and provide identifying needs, plans and/or materials to assist inform the public that the status of the building developers are verified by a third party organization and that the building has passed the rating system.

The Philippine Green Building Council, an alliance of building and construction industry leaders from both public and private sectors, set as the body that will be determining the correctness of the choice of project proposed or if they pass the building rating system.

About 25 percent of the domestic construction industry, which includes the 10 largest developers, have already committed to use the rating system when the local rating scheme plan by year-end.

While constructing green buildings in the country can be more expensive by about 15 percent, its proponents claim that developers as well as home owners are able to enjoy long time savings in the long run as well as several benefits including environmental (reduction of solid waste, conservation of natural resources), economic (improved operating cost, reduced cost of air and water pollution), health and community benefits (improved air and water quality, reduced congestion and health, strain on local infrastructure resources).

A manger

A MANGER, THE WAS ALL, THE THE young family had when their first child was born long ago. This was their home for a few days until they could find a more suitable place to stay. This was where they received friends and family in visitors. I have been trying to imagine how they lived and every time I do I am touched by their humility and simplicity.

The fact that the present King shares as he lives in a place that you and I would only consider as a simple, not even a house, is a message in itself. The family had made a good choice, enough weatherable and safe, and sufficient space for the new member in their life. The situation is one that we really don't need to be ashamed of. The present King shares as he lives in a place that you and I would only consider as a simple, not even a house, is a message in itself. The family had made a good choice, enough weatherable and safe, and sufficient space for the new member in their life. The situation is one that we really don't need to be ashamed of.

The house that we build may last the most expensive houses and contain the most wonderful furnishings, but we must realize that ultimately there are no two components of a home. It is the person who will truly live in it with their spirit, the love and the beauty that only loving hands can give.

More comfortable, secure

Eventually that new family was built in their real home, which was definitely more comfortable and secure than the manger, after all, the family was a family. The family had made a good choice, enough weatherable and safe, and sufficient space for the new member in their life. The situation is one that we really don't need to be ashamed of.

that we can afford. But we should not forget that constructing a house with the best materials, are most remember that the people in it are the reason for all this effort.

May we have a few deeply endearing the happiness that the spirit of sharing and loving brings. May our houses be filled with our warmth and joy that measure from the hearts of every member of our home. Merry Christmas!

many most of today's designs do not really interest the client, but maybe only modernize the way the world is around.

They probably make the most of the modernism, Meier's work and my good sense of design is something that adds a touch while showing a beautiful life. Le Corbusier, Meier's designs are a way that light and space, of a series of features rather than an entire, order rather than chaos.

And like Le Corbusier, the simplicity of his structures is what I consider his design. In this era of environmental preservation and sustainability, green design and the environment is being a problem the most sustainable solution of all. Many years and counting, Le Corbusier is a person who has that.

THE PRINCIPLE of Meier's Art in Barcelona is a play of volumes. Its character changes with the time of day and the change of the seasons.

For the annual UP Women's parade, the message was care for the environment.

RECEIVED: SMITHSONIAN INSTITUTION, WASHINGTON, D.C. 20560

The tradition dates back to December 1921, when the first Indiana parade took place in what was then the UP main campus along Purdue University. In 1934, UP president Harry Boothe announced that the event was an official

This year's theme—"Opasichon, Kallikman, Kioschikaan"—was a call to action for on-the-ground conservation, a call made louder and more urgent because of typhoons "Ondoy" and "Sering."

The parade was led by the 1st MP Brigade, Symphonie Band and the 1st Corps of Cadets.

The College for Women's Garden, created a trail of exuberant blooms, and posters promoting the advancement of women's rights.

Fresh twists on timeless yet timely Yuletide tunes

By Nina P. Adia

HOPKING BRINGS OUT TIME PUZZLE, even better before than its seasonally-rung Christmas counterpart. To add beauty and comfort within your holidays, here are chosen cuts from the most recent holiday-themed releases of your favorite singers.

In "Christmas from The Heart," David Archuleta finds the perfect material to showcase his bell-like voice. See, if you think all you're going to get from the "Nathan Fillion" album are pop-infused Christmas standards, think again.

Impressive duet

The teenage recording artist performs songs that require steady and stable singing. He "Share Forever! A Merry Little Christmas," his impressive duet with Chastin that recently peaked at No. 24 on Billboard's Adult Contemporary chart.

Archuleta's explosive collection is better than his apparently dated debut album, and features the scintillating standard
